

- I'm not a typical note-taking person, meaning that these notes were taken at very last minutes during my revision.
 - ☞ The notes are not intact. Some sections of the lectures are missing (I crammed them through... either via Anki or solely via my brain).
 - ☞ The notes are VERY SUBJECTIVE: they were written in a way by which helped me comprehend the concepts at that point. Very likely they are not presented in a way by which YOU see these knowledges.
 - ☞ They can be VERY messy to you. At least this is what I think when I reopened them a while after the finals.

- So... what is the point of me putting these notes?

Not sure.

I guess their greatest value is that in some parts I jotted some extra contents (from textbooks, from papers etc)? So in my own way I grasped a larger picture, or made things sound clearer, more thorough etc.

Besides, if you are thinking in a similar way, then hope in some parts my interpretation of the concepts not explained very clear during the lectures will help you in a way.
